

SOME NEWSPAPER CHAFF.

Is life worth living?
No, it ain't,
Unless your liver
Is a saint.

—March Bohemian.

The multitude of relatives had assembled to examine little Tommy.

"Dear me!" exclaimed Aunt True.

"The little darling has his mother's hair."

"And his father's eyes," chirped Uncle Ben.

"And his grandfather's chin."

"And his great-grandfather's toeratic nose."

"And his great-great-grandfather's brow of knowledge."

But Tommy was disgusted.

"Aw, they must have made me out of scraps," he pouted. "Ain't there no part about me that is just me without being borrowed?"—Chicago News.

A small citizen of Springfield, Massachusetts, made out a list of the things he hoped to receive his approaching birthday, and this is what his food mamma found recorded as the first item of all:

"Answer Testament, reversed virgin."

"You can't reason with a woman."

This was the decision Major Van Houten, in charge of the registration books at the city hall, reached yesterday after about fifteen minutes' spirited conversation with a woman over the telephone. When the Major answered the ring a feminine voice asked:

"I want to know if my sister can vote if she comes up to register?"

"How old is she?" asked the Major.

"She's only 19, but she's married," was the response.

"Well, she can't vote unless she's 21," said Van Houten. "It doesn't make any difference if she is married."

"I don't see why, come back over the wire," she just as much a woman as I am. She is married, even if she is only 19, and I think you might let her vote."

"I'm sorry, madam, but I can't change the laws."

"The laws ought to be changed, come back at the major as the receiver at the other end of the line was slammed up. But the Major only laughed as he said:

"These women are too much for me."—Kansas City Journal.

"Private" John Allen met Speaker Cannon in the house lobby and the two old friends exchanged greetings.

"You are not as young as you used to be, Joe," said the Mississippian, and you are well preserved."

"Not as well preserved as you are, John, but I'm not complaining." "I should think not," said the private, asking the speaker over; "even a man in your affluent circumstances has no right to complain when he has just had his salary raised $4,000 a year."

"John," replied the senator, impressively, as he placed his hand on the private's shoulder, "John, the true Christian soldier takes what is coming to him without murmur or regret."—Kansas City Star.

A Methodist of New York was praising the late Bishop C. C. McCabe.

"When Bishop McCabe was secretary of our missionary society," he said, "he added $500,000 yearly to its annual income."

I once heard the bishop ask a millionaire for a missionary contribution.

"Who was it?" said the millionaire, smiling, "that said charity begins at home?"

"Bishop McCabe frowned."

"It was someone, I'll be bound, he answered, who was looking for an excuse not to contribute."—Boston Herald.

Pat discharged his head plumber the other day for having the house bleed.

"Tie not much to a plumber yet a're," scented Patrick, "what ye can't stop a leak in yer own face!"—Ex change.

During the journey from Victoria Falls to Kimberly a big sun-browned man boarded the express train and his coat, with his shirt sleeves rolled up. He took a seat at dinner and the chief steward remarked to him that as there were ladies present he would have no objection to putting on his coat. "Great Scott!" the man replied. "I haven't worn a coat for nineteen years. You will have to wait, my friend, until I can buy one at Kimberly!"—Kansas City Star.

A lady had an amusing experience in a Buffalo street car. The car was empty with the exception of one man and he was the reverse of the car. As she entered, he rose, made her an unsteady, but magnificent bow, and said: "Madam, please be kind enough to accept this plume." Rather than offend the man, there was nothing else for her to do, so she thanked him and sat down. And for seven blocks he hung from the strap, swaying in the breeze, and not a soul in the car but the two. The lady says it is frequently that she is taken for other women, but that never before had anyone thought that she was a carful.—Argonaut.

At a hospital for the insane in Philadelphia a coterie of society women provide weekly concerts for the patients. At a recent concert a lady well known for her rigid conventionalism was on the platform reserved for the entertainers. Glancing down at the audience she saw a young man of bright appearance.

"Poor fellow," she remarked, "how miserable to be so afflicted at his age!" The young man's eye caught hers. "Dear me," she pursued, "there would be no harm in amusing him with something else than music," which was then sounding through the room. She slightly agitated her handkerchief. The young man took out his own. The grand dame raised her eyebrows to her lips. The young man raised his to his lips. "I have interested him," she said. "That is a point gained. They do not try to hold the attention of the insane in these places."

Enthusiastic over her success and thinking that no one saw her, she threw a kiss to the young man, who promptly reciprocated. Then the lady went to the physician in charge and stung out the young man asked if he had been very long at the institution.

"Not very," answered the alienist, "he is my new assistant."—Fort Worth Telegram.

Caught Cold While Hunting a Burglar.

Mr. Wm. Theo. Lanagan, provincial constable at Chatham, Ontario, says: "I caught a severe cold while hunting a burglar in the forest swamp last fall. Hearing of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, I tried it, and after using two small bottles, I was completely cured." This remedy is intended especially for coughs and colds. It will loosen and relieve a severe cold in less time than by any other treatment and is a favorite wherever its superior excellence has become known. For sale by P. J. Ramsey, W. B. Frame, Ardmore Drug Co., Bonner & Bonner.
